

Development returns at Jordan Creek

The opening of Jordan Creek Town Center in 2004 brought high expectations for commercial and residential development in West Des Moines. The commercial tax base in the immediate area has grown 12-fold to $551 million over the past eight years, but signs of the recession are evident in numerous vacant parcels waiting to be developed. Now, local developers say the interest from businesses and retailers is finally starting to pick up.

